GUIDELINES FOR PARTNERSHIP

Growing successful long-term school-community partnerships, whether with individual volunteers, service providers, community organizations or faith-based groups requires careful thought and organization. The benefits are great for both school and community, and worth the effort.

Here is a list of things to consider:

- PURPOSE: What will partners do? What gap exists that they can fill?
- COORDINATION: Who will take responsibility for the recruitment, welcoming and coordination of partner activities?
- ORIENTATION: School culture and processes can be confusing. How will partners be oriented to the school? How can partners help the school understand the community?
- COMMUNICATION: Who will communicate with partners in a timely manner?
- PLANNING: Many schools have regular meetings for partners to plan together. They can also be included in your CAC and PTA meetings.
- SAFETY: What do partners need to know about safety/security on campus?
- RESOURCES: What resources can your partners bring to the campus (volunteer time, funding, expertise, professional services)?
- RELATIONSHIP: How can you make sure that partners become a part of your school family? How can they help your staff understand and become part of the community?
- CELEBRATION: How will you celebrate partner contributions? How can partners help the school celebrate student achievement?

COMMUNITY/ BUSINESS PARTNERSHIP RESOURCES:

AISD Dept. of Communications & Community Engagement: The DCCE organizes district-wide events and strategies for outreach, publicizes campus events on the district website, offers translation/interpretation, and hosts a Spanish-language radio show, Educa-Austin.

Austin Council of PTAs: The ACPTA can put you together with other campuses that have been successful with building community partners.

Austin Partners in Education (APIE): APIE acts as a clearinghouse for connecting volunteers with schools. They also handle background checks for volunteers.

Austin Voices for Education and Youth (AVEY): AVEY partners with AISD to develop community & business partnerships in the EMVT. Monthly community partner meetings (Eastside Community School Alliance) are held at Eastside Memorial HS.

Beyond the Bake Sale: There is no better guide to developing a welcoming, community-involved campus. Lots of practical tips.

Coalition for Community Schools: This national organization has a great website with many resources for developing community school partnerships.
www.communityschools.org.

Martin Community School Alliance: The Martin Family Resource Center and its coordinating partner The Austin Project hold monthly partner meetings in the Martin MS library. Contact Beth Hurley at Martin MS for upcoming dates.

Parent Support Office (AISD): The Parent Support Office coordinates Parent Support Specialists and offers parent and community training events.
